Went He Didn't Feet That He Was Under Any Obligations to the Government to Stick It Out-Admits That He'd Had Offer Here-Doesn't Say What It Was.

John F. Wallace, whose resignation as chief engineer of the Panama Canal has just been accepted, gave out last night his reply to some of the charges made by Secretary Taft as to his motives for leaving his post. Mr. Wallace has been at the Hotel Marie Antoinette since his arrival here from Panama. He left town last night after giving out his statement.

Mr. Wallace denies that he was influenced by money, but while declaring that as long ago as last May he determined to quit at the earliest possible moment he does not give any of his reasons for so doing, except to say that they involve no criticism of the President or Mr. Taft.

Mr. Wallace, furthermore, does not disclose what he is going to do, nor assert that he has accepted the offer which he admits he received while on the Isthmus. All that he had to say in way of criticism was to the effect that obstacles in existing laws are serious and will have to be corrected if the canal is to be finished in a reasonable time and at reasonable cost. Here is his statement:

The primary causes which led me to tender my resignation as chief engineer of the Isthmian Canal Commission were underlying and fundamental, and I most emphatically resent the charge that my motive in leaving the work was a financial

A careful consideration of the entire subject had brought me to the decision that I should disconnect myself with the work at the earliest possible date that it could be done without embarrassment to the Administration or injury to the work. It is unnecessary to state the reasons for this decision except that in fairness I should sort of the President or the Secretary of War.

"My final decision was arrived at as the result of six of days uninterrupted thought, which I was able to give the subject in all Its bearings during my voyage to Colon in May. Furthermore, I had pledged myself to my family to give the matter of my resignation as chief engineer, or of any position which would require my continuous residence on the Isthmus, serious con-

"It was at this psychological moment that I received a cablegram from New York offering me a business opportunity which I was bound to consider. I therefore immediately cabled the Secretary of War requesting a conference, and arrived at New York for that purpose on Thursday. June 22.

In the meantime I had addressed a letter to the Secretary, in which I had confirmed the request for an interview and also requested my annual leave of absence, which quested my annual leave of absence, which was part of my original understanding with the Isthmian Canal Commission and which I had requested from Admiral Walker in March, to take effect at our mutual convenience some time later in the season, which request was not complied with or answered, owing probably to the sudden change in the commission on the 1st of April.

On my arrival in New York I was met by Mr. William Nelson Cromwell, who stated that he was delegated by the Secretary to arrange for a personal interview with me and asked if I would meet him at the Netherland Supplementary With Mr. Supplementary Wildel and Will and Wildel and Wildel and Wildel and Wildel and Wildel and Wil the Manhattan Hotel at 10 A. M. on Sun-

While Mr. Cromwell treated me with the suavity and courtesy for which he is noted, he endeavored to draw from me the suavity and courtesy for which he is noted, he endeavored to draw from me my reasons for desiring to see the Secretary. I told him frankly that I did not consider that it would be proper for me to discuss the matter in advance of my interview, and I also requested that the interview should be absolutely private and that no should be absolutely private and tha one but the Secretary and myself should-be present.

"This action of course caused irritation "This action of course caused irritation and apprehension on my part that the interview would be unpleasant and unsatisfactory, and the irritation under which the Secretary was evidently laboring had a tendency to prevent that calm and dignified consideration of the question in all its bearings which should have leen given it. "If the Secretary understood me to say that I had accepted a position in New York he labored under a misapprehension. I did state to him that I desired to accept one, but under such circumstances and spurned my suggestion and took the posi-tion that I was compelled under what he called my contract to remain in charge of the Isthmian Canal, regardless of cir-cumstances or conditions, until the com-pletion of the work, and spoke in such a manner as to outrage my feelings to such easons for my action was out of the ques-

"I did not seek the position of chief en-gineer of the Isthmian Canal Commission, and considering my salary as general mana-ger of the Illinois Central Railroad Company and my other sources of earnings, my financial condition was not improved by my acceptance of the position, and it was with the greatest reluctance that I did so.

"While it was my own expectation that I should continue my connection with the work, it did not occur to me that I was not free to withdraw if justice to myself and my family and to my reputation as an engineer required me to do so. It was not only my right but my duty to give the matter the specific careful consideration in all its heavy most careful consideration in all its bearings, considering not only the general situation as it affected the work, but my famlly, personal and business relations, and all the various factors entering into the prob-lem; and I could not concede the right to the Secretary of War or any one to dictate my decision. The only debatable questions were the details as to putting my decision into effect, and while I stated to the Secretary what my desires were. I told him that I was perfectly willing to conform to his wishes as far as possible as to the time and manner of my withdrawal.

"It was this suggestion to which he chose to refer as a 'dicker.' To that statement I naturally took exception, particularly as he stated that he did not care for any records that I might make, summarizing the results of a year's hard * Isthmus: also that he did not ed advice, and toat ...

"In regard to the situation on the Isthmus at Panama at no time during the progress of the work could my relations have been severed more opportunely than now and with less damage to the work. A complete organization of departments and bureaus has been effected; Mr. W. E. Dauchy, a has been effected; Mr. W. E. The only possible benefit that my personal service as chief engineer could have been to the work was such as might be due to the purely personal element, which would have been largely supplied by my contin-uance with the work in an advisory capacity. As far as the actual engineering and con-struction work was concerned, Mr. Dauchy was fully as capable as I.

"I have made no criticism of personnel or individuals, but do believe that the ob-stacles due to the governmental methods required by existing laws are so serious that they will have to be eliminated if the American people are to see the Panama Canal constructed in a reasonable time and at a moderate cost.

Mr. Wallace spent nearly all day yesterday in his apartments at the Marie Antoinette preparing this statement. With him were his son, H. U. Wallace, vice-president of J. G. White & Co., and Mr. Wallace's secretary. Mr. Wallace hurried away last night, taking pains to avoid the newspapermen who were waiting to ask him what concern had made him the offer described by Secretary Taft. The statement was given out after Mr. Wallace had got safely away from nursuers. There was a numor

"There is not the slightest truth in the report that the Interborough has had for a moment in mind the engagement of Mr. Wallace, nor will it consider it. The Interborough company does not make a practise of buying men from their engagements; it seeks to secure those who are willing to enter its service in a spirit of loyalty and who will remain and will serve its interests and identify their future with it, and above all, it will not go into the Government's service, to that service's detriment, ment's service, to that service's detriment and take away its best instruments, but will continue its efforts exclusively to build and manage transportation in Greater New York with the best material it can fairly and honorably command."

Thomas F. Ryan was quoted as saying:
"We have never negotiated for the services of Mr. Wallace either before or since his resignation as chief engineer of the Panama Canal. We have with us now John B. McDonald, who built the Interborough's subway system, so that there was no occasion why we should have required the services of any other chief engineer."

Mr. McDonald said he had never heard of such a thing.

gineer of the Panama Canal.

WASHINGTON, June 30 .- John F. Stevens of Chicago, formerly vice-president and general manager of the Rock Island Railroad system, to-day accepted the office of Chief Engineer of the Panama Canal, to succeed John F. Wallace, the story of whose retirement under somewhat sensational circumstances was told in an official statement issued by Secretary of War Taft last night. Mr. Stevens was recently selected as the government expert to supervise the construction of the thousand miles of railway to be built in the Philippines. He was to have gone to the Philippines with Secretary Taft, but according to the information which he sent to Mr. Taft to-day he will sail for Panama within two weeks. He will be accompanied to the Isthmus by Theodore P. Shonts, chairman of the Canal Commission.

Before leaving Washington for the Philippines this evening, Mr. Taft received word from Mr. Wallace, through a member of the Canal Commission, that it might be well for them to have another conference. as Mr. Wallace has some things to tell which the Government ought to know. The message from Mr. Wallace was being construed by officials as a declaration of intention on his part to divulge something sensational about conditions on the Isthmus unless Mr. Taft will give him a further was sent to Mr. Wallace. The only answer would have been a refusal on the part of Mr. Taft to meet Mr. Wallace, who is decidedly in the bad graces of the Administration. Wallace's offer to continue in the service of the Canal Commission was coupled with the proviso that whatever duties were given him must not interfere with the new private work he had under-taken, or take him out of New York. Con-taken, or take him out of New York. Considerable indigation is expressed here over this proposal, and it is understood that it had much to do with the severity of the language which Secretary Taft employed in responding to Mr. Wallace.

The Administration, it was explained today, hesitated over making a statement of what Secretary Taft said to Mr. Wallace at the Hotel Manhattan. From an officer of the highest standing it was learned that the decision to furnish such a statement to the country was based on the belief to the country was based on the belief that it would be well to let everybody con-nected with the construction of the canal understand that the Administration ex-pected on the part of all canal employees a devotion to duty which should overrule private considerations. Mr. Wallace, the Administration claims. bound himself in honor to stick by the Government, and his return from the Isthmus after only twelve days residence there, to accept a more lucrative position in the United States, is characterized as a proceeding contrary to the principles which should govern a man of his standing and reputation. reputation

Chief Engineer Stevens will receive a salary of $30,000 a year, or $5,000 more than Mr. Wallace was receiving in the same office. This was arranged between the President and Secretary Taft. He will be here in a few days to discuss his new be here in a few days to discuss his new duties with Chairman Shonts and other members of the Canal Commission. Mr. Wallace was a member of the commission. but Mr. Stevens will not be, at least for several months. The appointment of a commissioner to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Wallace's resignation will not be made until the return of Secretary Taft from the Philippines in October. In appounding the appointment of Mr.

Stevens the War Department gave out evens has been appointed wife and the 1sthmian Canal, with residence on the Isthmus, to take effect at once.

Mr. Stevens is now in the service of the Philippine Commission as Government railway expert in the 1,000 miles of Philippine railways about to be constructed under Government aid. Mr. Stevens was to have to-day accompanied Secretary Taft to the Philippines, but has been transferred to the Panama Canal

He was until recently vice-president and general manager of the Rock Island system, formerly chief engineer and general manager of the Great Northern Railway and has extended experience in the projection, construction, operation and management of large enterprises.

The duties of chief engineer of the Isthmian Canal especially relate to the practical work of construction and operation. The technical plans are to be determined by the commission as a body, with the advisory international board of engineers recently appointed by the President, and whose plans, as decided from stage to stage, will be executed on the Isthmus by the chief engineer. With the chief engineer confining himself to the actual work of construction and operation and concentrating upon the execution of the plans as adopted by the commission it is believed that the canal work will be more actively prosecuted.

CANAL'S SANITARY CONDITIONS. Former Employees at Panama Kick-Sam Davis's Body Back

Aboard the Panama Railroad's steamship Segurança, in yesterday from Colon, were fifteen former canal employees, most of whom either resigned or were discharged from Government service. Some of them had hard words to say about sanitary conditions on the Isthmus. Two passengers only had abnormally high temperatures, and they were unconnected with canal employment. They are John Albert Warren, 31 years old, a miner, and Lamont Northrup, 4 years old, and they were sent to Hoffman Island for observation. They have some sort of tropical fever. Mrs. Northrup went with her boy to the island. She said she had lived on to the island. She said she had lived on the Isthmus 11 months and that her husband was a station agent on the Panama

Railroad.

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING PLANS.

COMMISSION REPORTS INITIAL COST $7,567,000.

Twenty Per Cent. of That Sum. Report Says, Can Be Saved Yearly-Electricity for Whole City-Private Standards of Skill and Economy Assumed in Estimates

The commission, of which Cary T. Hutchinson is the head, appointed last fall by Mayor McClellan to prepare plans for a municipal lighting plant submitted yesterday a second report to the Board of Estimate. This report dealt mostly with the cost of construction of a central power station and the cost of operation of a plant to supply all public lighting by electricity to the exclusion of gas.

The specifications prepared by the commission cover 135 printed pages. Including land, buildings and all equipment for a central station to furnish all the electric lighting needed by the city the cost is set at $7,567,000. It has been worked out also by the commission that the annual cost of operating the plant, including interest on the outlay for construction and allowances for depreciation will be $1,289,000. According to these estimates the cost per arc light to the city would be $64.07 per year instead of the $146 which is charged by the lighting corporations for street lighting. For incandescent service it will be 5.5 cents per kilowatt hour instead of the 10 cent basis which the companies under the bill passed at the last session of the Legislature can charge.

The total cost of supplying the service contemplated in the report at the rates charged the city by the Edison company would be $2,750,000; the operation of this plant at the annual figure given above would therefore effect an annual saving of $1.481,000, equal to approximately 20 per cent, of the investment required.

The report says that material reductions can be effected by the use of smaller units for street illumination, and, in particular, the certification of the control of the control of the certification of the certification of the certification. by the use of a Nernst lamp of the series type, replacing the Welsbach and other gas and naphtha lights unit for unit. It adds:

Considerable saving in the cost of water pumping can be effected by the use of electrically driven centrifugal pumps in place of the steam driven pumps in all save the largest pumping plants.

The estimates of the cost of construction and of operation included in this report presuppose economy and skill equal to that shown in the conduct of private corporations.

We believe that the use of the city wastes as fuel for this plant would be entirely impracticable, this opinion being based on pre-liminary estimates. Attention is drawn by the commission to the fact that there are in Manhattan and the Bronx 442 miles of streets lighted by gas and naphtha and that the use of these would be eliminated by the plans recommended. mended. for the proposed central plant the city

BOY IN JAIL FOR MURDER.

Threw a Stone at Another Boy and It Missed Him and Hit His

SOMERVILLE, N. J., June 30 .- Dr. William H. Long, Coroner of Somerset county, held an inquest at Raritan to-day in the case of five-year-old Katie Jakel, who was killed by being struck on the head by a stone thrown by Harry Illingworth, aged 14, the son of George Illngworth, a former superintendent of the Somerset Woolen Mills.

The Rev. Dr. DeHart, pastor of the Third Reformed Church of Raritan, was foreman of the Coroner's jury. Witnesses swore that they had seen a quarrel between young Illingworth and the dead girl's brother, Jacob Jakel, aged 12. One witness declared that he saw Illingworth one witness declared that he as a warm of the in a fit of anger throw a stone at Jakel and that it hit little Katie Jakel, who was seated on the doorstep of her home. The jury found that the girl came to her death by being hit on the head by a stone thrown with wilful intent to injure Jacob Jakel.

This verdict placed the case before County Prosecutor Reger in a perplexing light. It was a matter of discussion among light. It was a matter of discussion among the authorities during the day whether a boy who threw a stone at another boy with intent to injure him and accidentally hit a little girl and killed her could be arrested on a charge of murder. Prosecutor Reger to-night decided that he could be, and young Illingworth, who is an invalid, was arrested at his home in Raritan by County Detective Totten and placed in the county jail without bail.

Young Farm Hand Who Had Been Discharged Shoots and Kills Charles Lutz, at Pawling-Confesses and Says He Didn't Think of Consequences

Charles Lutz, 30 years old, the manager of a farm at Pawling, a small town on the Harlem River Railroad, was murdered and robbed yesterday morning while returning to the farm in a milk wagon. Ten hours later George Smith, a discharged farm hand, was arrested here for the murder. He calmly admitted his guilt and was locked up at Police Headquarters. He got only $75.

Lutz was manager of a farm owned by John Wanzer. Smith, who had been seen hiding along the roadside, was immediately suspected of the murder. District Attorney Lee of Pawling notified Acting Inspector O'Brien that Smith might go to J. S. Stringham's employment agency, at 1801 Lexington avenue. Detective Sergeant Carey was sent there to watch for him. Smith had got his job at the farm through Stringham and had left his watch with Stringham as security for a loan of $3.50.

I was glad I quit because I learned afterward from Lutz that he would have disheared me on Saturday. He said I was charged me on Saturday. He said I was not strong enough for the work. Lutz said there was $3.95 due me, of which he was to send $3.50 to Stringham so I could get my watch. He gave me the balance and I borrowed $1.05 from him. I promised

"'Why, what's the matter, boy? I thought you were in New York.' I had to give some bluff, so I told him I had waited to ask him if I could stay until Sunday.

"'No,' he said, 'I'm going to send the money for your watch on the 9 something train and you'd better go, too.' Then he drove off. I didn't want to shoot him until after he had delivered the milk, because I'd have a better chance to get away.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., June 30.-Mrs. Phebe Gainford, a real daughter of the American Revolution and the last surviving member of a family of three sisters who four years ago were living under one roof, all daughters of Jabez Rockwell, a soldier of the Revolutionary War, is to-day celebrating her 100th birthday in this place at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Emma L. Crine, 227 East Main street. Mrs. Gainford was born in Pike county, Pa., June 30, 1805. She was twice married, first to John Kimble and second to William L. Gainford, who died many years ago. She was the mother of ten children, three of whom were by the first marriage. Mrs. Lucinda Valentine Mrs. Gainford's youngest sister, died in 1901, in her 86th year, and Mrs. Catherine Bowden. the second sister, died in 1904, at the age of 92. For many years these three sisters enjoyed the unique distinction of being the only three living members of a family who were daughters of a soldier of the Revolution. In recognition of this fact the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution presented each with a golden memorial souvenir spoon, designed by and emblematic of the society.

There were present at to-day's family reunion the children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren of Mrs. Gainford, and there were a number of callers who paid their respects. She appeared to be in good spirits and fairly good health and shows no marked signs of physical breakdown. Mrs. Gainford's memory is still fairly good, striking proof of which she gave to the reporter by repeating accurately in his presence a favorite hymn of her father; which she had learned many years ago by hearing him sing it. Her mind frequently reverts to the period of her early childhood. Her earliest recollections are of the stories which her father used to tell of his experiences as a caldier is the experiences as a s of the Revolution; of Washington and Lafayette and other distinguished soldiers and statesmen of the period; of how he obtained the famous powder horn in a guessing contest at Valley Forge, devised by Gen. Washington, which horn now forms one of the most interesting relics at the old stone house at Valley Forge; of how in 1824, he walked from Milford, Pa., to New York city to see Gen. Lafayette, then on a visit to the United States, and how, in spite of the supercilious hotel clerk, he then on a visit to the United States, and how, in spite of the supercilious hotel clerk, he secured an interview with the Gene al; of how courteously he was treated on that occasion by Henry Clay, and because of which he deviated from his lifelong political faith and voted for Clay when he ran for President of the United States.

The Lafayette incident occurs al while Jabez Rockwell was a resident of Milford, Pa., where he was honored for forty years

Pa., where he was honored for forty years with the office of Justice of the Peace. Rockwell's veneration for Lafayette was second only to that for Washington. At the time of Lafayette's visit he was 63 years old. After having walked from his home. distance of seventy-two miles, to Nev a distance of seventy-two miles, to New York city, in company with three other veterans of the Revolutionary Army, permission was denied them by the haughty hotel clerk to see Lafayette. They pleaded that their long walk was for no other purpose than seeing their belowed General but the clerk was obdurate and ordered em away. This aroused the ire of Rocktion he said: Young man, we have traveled on foot two days to see Gen. Lafayette. We fought under him before you were born; we are now under the same roof with him, and if it is necessary to have another fight to see him we are ready."

This had the desired effect. Their names were sent up to Lafayette's room, where he was conferring with the Mayor of the city and a Congressional committee, of which Henry Clay was a member, and the General requested Clay to invite them in. They received a hearty welcome, and it was because of the courteous treatment by Henry Clay that Rockwell, who was a life-long Democrat, in his eighty-third year cast last Presidential vote for Henry Clay.

HAD SPECULATOR ARRESTED. Hot Time at Hippodrome Family Circle

Intake While Manager Pressed a Charge. George Kingsbury, business manager of the Hippodrome, saw two ticket speculators carrying away a $65 grilled iron sign from the main entrance last night and he called Policeman Carlin. One of the men ran away and the other, who stood his ground, said they were not stealing the ground, said they were not stealing the sign, but were moving it away so that they could stand in the space it had occupied.

Kingsbury seemed to think the speculator had designs on the sign and he insisted on his arrest. He was arrested, but in the East Fifty-first street station Kingsbury relented sufficiently to charge him only with disorderly conduct.

While Kingsbury was at the police station there were doings around the family circle entrance of the Hippodrome, on the Forty-third street side of the building. He keeps the family circle tickets in his desk and gives them out to the ticket sellers as they are needed. He did not give out the tickets last night before he started for the police station, and while he was there men and women began to demand family circle seats. There were none on sale and the ticket sellers could not demand family circle seats. There were none on sale and the ticket sellers could not get any without finding Kingsbury.

The manager was finally brought back in a cab in time to prevent a small riot.
